A LSS school is a remarkable 2-day program that can leave you wanting to do stock work, seeing the economic benefits in the kilos gained and the ease in which stockhandling can be achieved. See how to make more $$$$ from your stock.

Before it is possible to get our animals in the right frame of mind we first have to get our mind and attitude right.

As Low Stress Stockhandling travelled extensively throughout Australia and overseas, conducting workshops, we have observed some extremely competent stockmen and women.

Wherever we go we see a familiar pattern emerge in the way people work animals.

No matter what the situation people are handling animals in, either mustering, yard work, processing, loading trucks, dairying or through slaughterhouses, there is a common theme or pattern, we work with our own instincts.

While this achieves a result quite often, i.e. most of us manage to get our animals to the yard; it is not always a way in which it is conducive to low stress on the animal and us.

LSS can help you achieve calm, confident management of livestock in all situations.

Schools cater for someone who has little or no experience in handling stock as well as highly competent stockpeople.

Grahame Rees - 02 6332 2135

Grahame Rees grew up and spent most of his life on the family properties at Ivanhoe in western NSW. After attending a Stockhandling school in 1999 with Bud and Eunice Williams he realised there were huge benefits in handling animals differently. In 2002 he teamed up with Jim Lindsay to share these advanced animal handling skills and has since trained over 1800 people across Australia.

Grahame says “I am constantly surprised by the achievements by Graduates of LSS. Both sheep and cattle producers are finding increased animal performance, easier handling in all situations with less effort and labour. Whether it is imprinting and weaning calves and lambs, settling bought stock or handling our livestock in the paddock or the yards everyone seems to find something to improve their livestock operation.”

He believes the added benefit of having people work in a Low Stress environment leads to a safer workplace and staff satisfaction.
