A LSS school is a remarkable 2-day program that can leave you wanting to do stock work, seeing the economic benefits in the kilos gained and the ease in which stockhandling can be achieved. See how to make more $$$$ from your stock.

Before it is possible to get our animals in the right frame of mind we first have to get our mind and attitude right.

As Low Stress Stockhandling travelled extensively throughout Australia and overseas, conducting workshops, we have observed some extremely competent stockmen and women.

Wherever we go we see a familiar pattern emerge in the way people work animals.

No matter what the situation people are handling animals in, either mustering, yard work, processing, loading trucks, dairying or through slaughterhouses, there is a common theme or pattern, we work with our own instincts.

While this achieves a result quite often, i.e. most of us manage to get our animals to the yard; it is not always a way in which it is conducive to low stress on the animal and us.

LSS can help you achieve calm, confident management of livestock in all situations.

Schools cater for someone who has little or no experience in handling stock as well as highly competent stockpeople.

TRAINER

Jim Lindsay

Jim Lindsay was born in 1957 and raised on a two million-acre cattle property in far south-west Queensland, and his association with stock has been ‘before he could remember’.

After leaving school at an early age, he worked as a stockman and horse-tailer on North Queensland Gulf properties, before returning to the south-west country, to run a stock camp and contract muster. He has been involved with large herd management in extensive areas as well as droving cattle.

In 1980 he purchased his own cattle property in north-west Queensland, in the Hughenden area, and has been conducting working dog and Stockhandling Schools since the early nineties.

Jim believes that one’s attitude is the key to obtaining benefits both to people and livestock and promotes harmony between man, and dog, and animal, in the working environment.
