A LSS school is a remarkable 2-day program that can leave you wanting to do stock work, seeing the economic benefits in the kilos gained and the ease in which stockhandling can be achieved. See how to make more $$$$ from your stock.

Before it is possible to get our animals in the right frame of mind we first have to get our mind and attitude right.

As Low Stress Stockhandling travelled extensively throughout Australia and overseas, conducting workshops, we have observed some extremely competent stockmen and women.

Wherever we go we see a familiar pattern emerge in the way people work animals.

No matter what the situation people are handling animals in, either mustering, yard work, processing, loading trucks, dairying or through slaughterhouses, there is a common theme or pattern, we work with our own instincts.

While this achieves a result quite often, i.e. most of us manage to get our animals to the yard; it is not always a way in which it is conducive to low stress on the animal and us.

LSS can help you achieve calm, confident management of livestock in all situations.

Schools cater for someone who has little or no experience in handling stock as well as highly competent stockpeople.

Andrew Lewis - 0419 654 289

Andrew Lewis grew up on the Darling Downs in a sheep and cattle district. From an early age his Grandfather nurtured his passion for working with livestock and the rural industry. Since leaving school he has gained extensive experience across Queensland of twenty years working and managing livestock enterprises that practise holistic land management and low stress stock handling. Andrew and his wife Dannielle spent around five years working with Jim and Terry Lindsay at Hughenden. The time with the Lindsay's fine tuned Andrew's grazing and stock handling skills and also brought into focus the importance of continual self improvement. This influence led to a further eight years in training and extension work supporting agricultural businesses and rural education.
